This paper presents a rigorous solution of the Helmholtz equation for regular waveguide structures with the finite sizes of all cross-section elements that may have an arbitrary shape. The solution is based on the theory of Singular Integral Equations (SIE). The SIE method proposed here is used to find a solution to differential equations with a point source.

The goal of this article is to discuss the Simple Equations Method (SEsM) for obtaining exact solutions of nonlinear partial differential equations and to show that several well-known methods for obtaining exact solutions of such equations are connected to SEsM. In more detail, we show that the Hirota method is connected to a particular case of SEsM for a specific form of the function from ...
